In darkest outback Australia, Bad-Luck Baz was already on his third beer of the day. One more, he reckoned, and I'll get out of bed and make breakfast. Baz had been on a roll for over a year now. All downhill rolling. He cursed the clairvoyant on a daily basis, sometimes several times a day.

Baz's run of bad luck had started in December. By February of the following year, he was a world-wide sensation – the unluckiest man in the world. Undisputed champion. The clairvoyant had warned him it was 'good news, bad news.' If only he had listened. 'If only' was a phrase Baz used a lot these days.

It had started innocently enough. Clairvoyant Kate had covered his marriage breakup and subsequent divorce in surprising detail, gone to how he lost his job, and added some fascinating details Baz thought he had covered up well; she was good. It was then Baz made his fatal mistake. "Don't suppose you could give me Saturday's lottery numbers" Baz had joked. She had held his left hand tightly – to allow psychic flow, she assured him – put a pencil in his right hand and paper before him. She had then done a very credible impression of a trance.

With a good foreign accent for effect, she had reeled off:

1, 3, 10, 15, 18, 24, 28, 29, 32, 35, 38, 40

before collapsing on the table, completely drained by the effort. She was good, very good, Baz thought – lovely sense of theatre. 'Ze seeks are in zere zomewhere' she had assured Baz.

Then she put on her most ominous look. 'But, I zee gut and bad news. Knowing ze seeks winning numbers may bring you pain; be very careful.' Sod you, Baz had thought – give me the numbers and let me worry about being happy.

By the next day, the numbers had got to him. They wouldn't go away. 'What if the six winning numbers really are in there?' The more he thought about it, the more convinced he was. They WERE there.

But Baz had a problem. He counted up his meagre funds. $662 in total. He knew there were 924 different six-number combinations in twelve numbers – but he hadn't got $924. Still, he reckoned, if I play 662 different combinations I'm covering over two-thirds of all possible combinations.

By lunchtime he was convinced. Baz sat down at the kitchen table and, starting at 1-3-10-15-18-24, he started writing out as many six number combinations as he could think of, using only the twelve numbers the clairvoyant had given him. 'Ze seeks are in zere zomewhere' he muttered to himself as he worked, carefully numbering the games. By 8 pm he had got to 662 games – having stopped at 600 to count his money again 'just in case.'

The two-day wait to Saturday night had seemed an eternity. But the big day came. He just KNEW he had the winners.

Number 32 the blonde announcer beamed. Baz smiled. Number 28 she continued. Number 38; Baz now had a smile broader than the announcer. Number 40; the adrenalin flowed ever more strongly. Number 29 – Baz wondered if all lottery winners peed in their pants, because he was about to. Number 35, number 35, he coaxed. Number 35 the announcer beamed. People told Baz later his 'YES' had been heard three streets away. All six. Glorious. He poured a strong whisky and sat down to check how many wins he had in his 662 games – Baz knew you got multiple winners with so many games.

Here are the 662 games Baz checked. How many games can you find with four winning numbers from the six winning numbers drawn: 28, 29, 32, 35, 38, 40. Tick them off and count them.

The anxiety had started around game 200. Not a single winner so far. By game 400 he was sweating profusely and his stomach was knotted. Nothing yet. Tears were welling up in his eyes by game 600 – no winners yet. The tears flowed at 662 games. It wasn't possible. There HAD to be a winner somewhere. He must have missed it. He went to the sink, splashed cold water over his face, poured another whisky and with a deep breath started re-checking.

Just after midnight, Baz acquired his "Unluckiest Man In The World" title. He had played 662 of the 924 games possible with twelve numbers and hadn't won a cent¹. He spent the entire night, staring into space, staring at the coupons, staring into space, staring at the coupons. It is NOT possible, he kept telling himself. It was¹.

Worse was to follow. The picture in Monday's newspaper leapt out at him. "Clairvoyant 'sees' Winning Lottery Numbers" the headline screamed. It was her. The bastard had used the numbers herself and won $1,000,000.00. He felt like throwing up and decided to line his stomach with more whiskey, as a precaution. He sat down at the table, stunned, and started to read.

'I did zis reading on Tuesday and ze numbers were so clear. For rest of the week, I look in crystal ball and all I see are ze weening seeks numbers. I lie down to sleep – all I see are ze numbers. I just know they will come out. So I play zem, but I expect to share first prize wiz the guy I give the numbers on Tuesday.

'Biiiiiiiiitch,' screamed Baz, a scream heard four blocks away. He read on. 'But I only 'ave $262, so I cannot play a full system 12. I concentrate, concentrate, concentrate, trying to get ze best numbers to play. 'Is this the luckiest woman in the world?' the sub headline had asked. Bad-luck Baz read on. 'Like I say, I can only afford 262 games – but every single one won!'

'#&@* #&@ $%#@*$' Baz howled. 262 games and every one wins! I play 662 and every one loses. From the same 12 numbers. Baz had long since concluded the world was unfair. Now he was certain.

Below are the games Clairvoyant Kate played. Check them out. Every single game has 4, 5, or 6 winning numbers. In fact, Kate had six numbers once, 5 numbers 36 times and 4 numbers a massive 225 times.

After this, bad-luck Baz continued his downward spiral, while Clairvoyant Kate went from strength to strength. Her tatty little tent in a Sydney backstreet was replaced by flash new premises close to the airport. The million she won on the lottery became chicken feed compared to the income from her new business. She got a friend to set up a website and sold horoscopes by email. If each of the 50,000 email customers had known about the other 49,999, they would surely have wondered when Kate slept.

She took on an assistant – bookings were strictly by appointment now, no walk in off the street stuff. Clairvoyant Kate learnt to ‘upsell’ and customers who came for a $100 reading rarely left without spending at least $250. Her favourite ‘upsell’ was the magic crystal ball at $150. It cost $35 from Hong Kong and was programmed with 200,000 ‘predictions’ all delivered randomly. For the cheapskates, there were the lucky lotto numbers generators, at only $30. 45 ping ball, all numbers; you emptied them out and the six that rolled furthest were the ones to play. There were variations; cat lovers, for example, rolled them out and the first six your cat played with were the ones. Black cats were doubly lucky.

Kate's fame increased - as did sales of lucky lotto numbers generators - when a black cat named "lucky" picked all six winning numbers only 12 weeks after it's owner purchased the generator. That this probably said more about how many cat lovers there were in Australia than how lucky their cats were was lost on most people. Millions of cats got new names - all the same! Kate pushed her luck by declaring black cats on their 7th life were especially lucky. The Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals had a run on black cats named lucky who were on their seventh life - unable to meet demand, it too started renaming, much to the chagrin of older, more conservative, members.

Bad-luck Baz had his share of fame, but it was all of the wrong kind. An official entry in the Guinness Book of Records as The Worlds Unluckiest Man was an honour Baz could have lived without. He had a second, short-lived record for 'TV presenter chucking.' An idiot TV show host had asked one silly question too many and Baz proved man could fly without wings. His throw, from the TV presenter's chair to the front row, was a good throw but a Sumo wrestler had upstaged it only two weeks later. Baz reckoned he had cheated. The Sumo had lifted a TV presenter overhead before chucking and made the third row. Baz had thrown underarm and reckoned his record should stand. Whatever, it had bought a swift end to bad-luck Baz's career as a TV celebrity.

And what can we learn from the legend of Bad-Luck Baz and Clairvoyant Kate?

Lessons-In-Lottery

A 12-Part Course that takes you from beginner to Lottery Expert!

Lesson 1 - The Seven "Smart-Play" Zones

An Introduction to "Lottery Profiling" and "Ball-Position Analysis." In plain english, how should your lottery behave in theory - and does it behave that way in practice? For example, in a 45-ball Lottery, there are 8,145,060 ways to combine 6 numbers. For Odds & Evens, for example, 2,727,340 of those combinations (33.5%) are 3-odd/3-even. How does this help? Well, on average, a 3-3 result is due every third week - if there has not been a 3-3 result for six weeks, it is a SHORT-TERM TREND that is way overdue. Following short-term trends is far more rewarding than trying to pick individual numbers. We calculate, over 500 draws, how many times different combinations should come out (168 times for 3-odd/3-even) in theory - and how often they actually did come out (166 times). We also show you what NOT to do.

Lesson 2 - Six Systems for "Smart-Play" Zones.

*No point in having the above knowledge if you have no tools to use with it! These are EXCLUSIVE systems. The Guarantees are spelt out for each System. Normally, there are MULTIPLE Guarantees - a unique feature of Lotto-Magic Systems. Systems are included for 8, 9, 10, 12 (2) and 15 numbers. System SPZ515 for 15 Numbers reduces the 5,005 games required for a Full System 15 to 216 games (in 6 Groups) and GUARANTEES if you have ONE winning number included in EACH GROUP - YOU HAVE FIRST PRIZE!

Lesson Three - How to Get TWENTY-FOUR Winning Lottery Numbers

Every Week - In just 24 Games! Includes an Introduction to THE LOTTO-MAGIC GUARANTEED WINNING NUMBERS STRATEGY™. You can use this Strategy with as little as two coupons - it does not have to be expensive.*

Lesson Four - POWERBALL & PICK-5 MAGIC - The Secrets of how

*Powerball/Pick-5 games work! By modeling what happens in Powerball / Pick-5 Draws, you can significantly improve your chances. Which is fine IF you KNOW what actually happens in Pick-5 Draws. Most people have no idea. They complain about working 50, 60, even 80 hours a week to make ends meet - but refuse to take an hour to find out how Powerball/Pick-5 games work.
GET SMART TODAY!*

*All Lessons cost $10 each; $15 for 2; $20 for 3 -
IF Lessons are purchased together.*

WINNING LOTTO - SECRETS THE EXPERTS DON'T WANT YOU TO KNOW

SUITABLE FOR ANY LOTTERY WORLDWIDE.

The LottoMasta - a qualified Accountant - suggests a Systematic, well-organized entry that wins regular small Divisions has a better chance of cracking the big one. The "Saturday Night Special" featured in his book won at least a minor Division 60% of the weeks played. It consists of 10 separate Systems of 12 numbers. Overall, the plan covers all 45 numbers in Australian Lotteries (adapts quickly & easily to any Lottery world-wide. Each individual System guarantees - if there are 6 winning numbers in the 12, then 5 or more will be in at least one game. This is organized through a mathematically precise arrangement of the 12 numbers with a guaranteed result - a minimum of a Third Division, at 10% of the cost of a full System - and it could be a First!

This significant reduction in cost means you can play multiple System-Type entries!

Ten entries of a Modified System 12 (The Saturday Night Special) costs $212 (Aust) to play on a Saturday - a reasonable figure for a Syndicate. An individual can play a single LottoMasta Modified System 12 for only $21-20 (Aust). These easy to use Systems can be calculated manually from templates provided.

Our LottoMasta Syndicate, run by a Lotto Agent, (a more complex, computer-generated entry based on The Saturday Night Special) won over 1,500 Divisions in 60 weeks. This included two Second and seven Third Divisions, with the System winning for 50 of the 60 weeks. Although this System lost money overall due to the cost of playing, the regular wins held great promise for the big one. The underlying principles were those laid down in "Winning Lotto." With a change of Lottery Agent, the Syndicate was discontinued.

"Winning Lotto - Secrets the Experts Don't Want You To Know" is state-of-the art and is now available as a quality printed book or in electronic form. The electronic version allows you to easily create as many lottery systems as you want, using your own numbers, by using "Find and Replace" in any word processor.
